

UMBC's Department of Psychology presents

YOUTH CRITICAL RACIAL CONSCIOUSNESS DEVELOPMENT: EXPLORING SOCIOCULTURAL SUPPORTS, YOUTHVOICE, AND PATHWAYS FOR ACTION

Dr. Josefina Bañales

Assistant Professor
Community and Applied Developmental Psychology
University of Illinois, Chicago
Adjunct Assistant Professor
Department of Psychology, UMBC

In this talk, Dr. Bañales will engage theory and empirical research on how youth develop beliefs, feelings, and actions that challenge racism, or youths' critical racial consciousness development. She will present three studies that illuminate: (1) the development of critical racial consciousness and the role of sociocultural factors and social contexts in this process, 2) the power of youth voice to elucidate the nature of youth critical racial consciousness, and 3) how to co-develop empirically-based interventions with youth partners that stimulate youth critical racial consciousness. We will conclude with a discussion of future directions.
